PROFILE

Kamakshi Bhargava is a Masters student passionate about the intersection of technology and international affairs — specifically focusing on American national security and disruptive technology trends in energy, privacy and cybersecurity. I have extensive foreign travel experience and developed mastery in Mandarin Chinese and Hindi. As a cyber threat analyst I have been able to enhance the dialogue surrounding emerging and disruptive tech and the threats they pose national security. I hope to continue to use both my technical quantitative background and my training and experience in the IC to bridge the divide between emerging technologies and the mission of national security.
